New Faces on Campus:

President Tony G. Waldrop and his wife, Dr. Julee Waldrop

This fall, as more than 2,000 freshmen start their first year at the University of South Alabama, there's another new face on campus as well. Dr. Tony G. Waldrop arrived in April as the University's third president.

Most recently, Dr. Waldrop served as provost and executive vice president at the University of Central Florida. Other stops in his career included vice chancellor for research and economic development at the University of North Carolina (UNC) and vice chancellor for research at the University of Illinois.

Dr. Waldrop earned a bachelor's degree in political science, a master's degree in physical education and a Ph.D. in physiology, all from UNC. As an undergraduate, he was a John Motley Morehead Scholar. As an athlete, he won two NCAA championships in the mile and in 1974, he set a world record for the indoor mile at 3:55.

His wife, Dr. Julee Waldrop, holds a doctor of nursing practice degree from Duke University. She has been a professor at the University of Illinois at Chicago, the University of North Carolina and the University of Central Florida.

Dear USA Alumni,

As you read our newest edition of Looking South magazine, I will have just completed my fourth month as your new president. Even though I have been very busy, it has been a rewarding and exciting time as I learn more about the University and the community. In addition to the day-to-day operation of this University, I have met students, faculty, staff and alumni as well as community and business leaders. Julee and I have been very impressed by the commitment of everyone to make USA an even better university. It is clear that our alumni are passionate about their experiences as students and are currently very engaged and excited about the future of our University.

In April, Julee and I participated in the inaugural JaguarsCare National Day of Service sponsored by the National Alumni Association. We were inspired by the number of alumni, students, faculty, staff and friends who came out to participate in the many projects locally, across the nation and around the world. Julee and I had the opportunity to walk alongside a large contingent of Jaguars at the March of Dimes "March for Babies" event in the Geri Moulton Children's Park at USA Children's & Women's Hospital, and then we spent time sorting and packaging food at the Bay Area Food Bank. It was an honor to experience first-hand true leadership in service, which is quickly becoming a hallmark of Jag Nation. On behalf of the University of South Alabama, thank you for representing us so well!

My inauguration is scheduled for Friday, Sept. 12, at 2 p.m. at the USA Mitchell Center. I plan to set out our shared vision and goals for the future of South Alabama. The inauguration will precede the Jaguars versus Mississippi State Bulldogs football game, our first ever SEC home matchup. I invite you to join us during this special weekend and I hope to have the opportunity to meet as many of you as possible. As alumni you are truly the lifeblood of this University - you represent our past and your support and guidance will help shape our future.

Sincerely,

Tony G. Waldrop, Ph.D.
President

Dr. Steven P. Furr, '76, MD '81, Chair Pro Tempore, USA Board of Trustees; Lisa Furr; Jean Botti, Chief Technical Innovation Officer, Airbus Group; Dr. Julee Waldrop; and Dr. Tony Waldrop, President, University of South Alabama at the spring commencement ceremony. Mr. Botti was the keynote speaker.

Meet the Waldrops

Looking South: What do you like most about the University of South Alabama?

Dr. Tony Waldrop: How welcoming the University community and the community as a whole is. On the trip home from the interview, Julee said, "That's the place for us." But it's not just University folks. The area wants to see South Alabama grow into an even better University.

LS: What is the most common question you hear from alumni?

Dr. Tony Waldrop: "When are we getting a football stadium?" and "Where are we going from here?" They're all asking it in a way that's saying, "We want to get better, let's find a way to continue to improve."

LS: What role do you see alumni playing in the University?

Dr. Tony Waldrop: They're our public relations folks, our ambassadors, telling people about the University of South Alabama. They're also helping us recruit. They're a group I can go to for advice. The more input you can get, the better off you are when leading a University. What better group to ask than one that has had the experience of being a student?

LS: What do you do in your spare time?

Dr. Tony Waldrop: I love to kayak. If there's time, that's what I want to do. Since I live by a calendar most of the time, I like to have time to kayak without worrying about my next meeting. I like walking on the beach. I like seeing the birds and other wildlife. We especially enjoy Dauphin Island.

LS: You had a shot at the Olympics and passed it up to focus on your education. Can you explain that decision?

Dr. Tony Waldrop: I had a chance to try to go to the Olympics, to try to qualify. Athletics is a great thing for many, many young men and women. It gives them the opportunity to go to college, it teaches them many life skills. I've realized there's not anything I do where I don't use the skills I learned as an athlete. I ended my competitive running career when I had done what I wanted to do, and I wanted to move on with the rest of my life. I really didn't know then that education would be such a big part of my life. It was an easy decision to make, but it was not an easy decision for other people to accept. I had maybe one moment of second thoughts. When the Olympic 1500 meter race was run, I was studying for a freshman chemistry class I had to take to get into graduate school. I watched the race, and realized the way the race was run would be perfect for my running style, went back upstairs, opened my book and went back to studying.

LS: You have three degrees, and your wife has four degrees. Is education a priority for your family?

Dr. Tony Waldrop: I came from a blue-collar family and my brother and I always knew we were going to college because my parents knew the value of education. It's important for a family to have that perspective, and it's important for them to do everything they can to help the student be successful. We're big believers in a liberal arts education. It's about the whole person, not just a single discipline. Our oldest son has a bachelor's degree in philosophy and recently finished his master's at UAB in mathematics. Our youngest son has a degree in English. He moved to Austin, Texas, and had several part-time jobs while looking for a job. We encouraged him to go back

Dr. Julee Waldrop received the Fellow Award from the American Association of Nurse Practitioners (AANP). The Fellow Award impacts national and global health by engaging recognized nurse practitioner leaders who make outstanding contributions to clinical practice, research, education, or policy to enhance the AANP mission.

The Waldrops explore their new community with regular early morning walks, accompanied by Krista, the family dog.

to get a computer certification at the local community college. He did that and now he has a job he really enjoys.

LS: Dr. Julee Waldrop, what are your plans?

Dr. Julee Waldrop: I started in June part-time at the Mobile County Health Department as a pediatric nurse practitioner, primarily seeing adolescents. The Health Department is committed to providing teenagers with information, support, resources and referrals to help them make better choices about their health, including those related to risky behaviors with potential long term consequences like pregnancy, drug use and sexually transmitted infections.

LS: How do you see your role unfolding at USA?

Dr. Julee Waldrop: I'm a huge advocate for everything that has to do with the University. I'm doing lots of work to learn about the University and the community. As I get out and do that, I can find where my skill set might be most useful.

Dr. Tony Waldrop: It's the two of us together, it's not me. My last two positions, I only looked at them because she knew I was not completely happy. She's my biggest supporter and my harshest critic.

LS: You're known for walking every morning. Is this a fitness regimen?

Dr. Tony Waldrop: Those early morning walks are about the only quality time we have. There are no distractions. I'm just getting out and clearing my mind. I'm not being rushed by the next thing I have to do. Julee doesn't consider that exercise; she works out after our walks.

Dr. Julee Waldrop: These are our daily dates. At the end of the day, we're tired, we don't think well, there are more people around. We've got Spring Hill down pretty good, and we're exploring Midtown. We try to walk for at least 45 minutes a day, and he walks really fast. I have to jog every once in a while to catch up.

LS: What are your priorities?

Dr. Julee Waldrop: I see myself as a supporter of Tony. And I want to be a role model for health and wellness and personal commitment to things that satisfy you professionally. I hope young women can see how to be a supportive spouse and not have to give up your own dreams, even if you have to change them or find a different way to reach them.

Held on April 26, 2014, alumni from Mobile to Mongolia, Houston to Haiti, and Los Angeles to Washington, D.C., took on a variety of projects, some big and some small, all under the name of the University of South Alabama.

Projects ranged from Earth Day Paint Recycling at Atlanta's Dunwoody Nature Center to a cleanup project at the USA Baldwin County Campus to clearing trails at Red Mountain Park in Birmingham. In Mobile, the Port City chapter took on a number of projects, including sorting food at the Bay Area Food Bank, installing new fencing at the Mobile Zoo and the March of Dimes March for Babies.

Life in the FAST LANE

Fairhope native and University of South Alabama alumnus Grant Enfinger '07 started racing at age 11. Fast forward 18 years and he has become the second driver in the Automobile Racing Club of America (ARCA) series' 62-year history to win the first three races of the year. The last driver to accomplish the same feat did so in 1970. Pulling off a win at this level isn't easy, much less three in a row to start the season, and Enfinger and his team are excited for their future.

His first big league win came last year right here in Mobile at the ARCA Mobile 200, and he was able to repeat the performance again this year at his home track. In addition to taking the checkered flag again at Mobile in 2014, Enfinger was awarded the key to the City of Fairhope in the company of friends and family. This honor came on the heels of his season opening win at Daytona, the highlight of his career to date, and since then, all eyes have been on him. Not only has he become a hometown hero, but he is also garnering a great deal of attention throughout the racing world. In addition to winning three races back-to-back, Enfinger has had top ten finishes in nine of the ten ARCA races this year. With half the racing season still to go, he is off to a great start, to say the least.

Aside from making history on the race track, graduating from USA's Mitchell College of Business in 2007 is a significant achievement for Enfinger. He is especially proud of his Marketing degree from USA and has put it to great use during his career. "So much of racing is marketing," he said. Whether he's in meetings or out trying to land corporate sponsors, Enfinger said his education and business knowledge give him an advantage. "Being in a field where not a lot of other drivers can say they have a four-year degree definitely sets me apart," he added.

"I started racing when I was 11," said Enfinger. "It's been something I've always done, in some form or fashion." Racing was a constant during his time here at USA as well. For Enfinger, undergraduate life was a balancing act between work, racing, and academics...even having to miss class occasionally for a race. When asked what classes or professors made an impression on him during his academic career, he said that while he enjoyed most all his business classes, Business Law with Judge Don Banks was his favorite. He credits some of that interest to the fact that he comes from a family of attorneys. "Both my father and sister are lawyers," he said. Outside the classroom, Enfinger has fond memories from his time spent at South. When prompted to share some funny stories during an interview, he jokes he has plenty, but "probably not many you can print."

Enfinger tries to make it back to Fairhope six to eight times a year to visit family and friends, but with races nearly every weekend throughout the 2014 season, this may prove to be a little more difficult this year. After an overall successful 2013 season that ended with a disappointing last race, Enfinger and his team are hoping for more wins and a chance to compete for a championship in 2014. With four history-making wins already under their belt so far, they're on the right track.

Written by Marie Fox, membership specialist in the Office of Alumni Relations.

Grant Enfinger '07 grew up in Fairhope, Ala., and has been racing since he was 11 years old.

More than meets the

EYE

“Before I got involved, I thought you gave the money and that was the end of it. That’s not how I look at it now. It’s an investment in people, an investment in your community that comes back to you.”

- Linda Marx

After returning from Iraq in 2010, Angie Tripp made the bold decision to leave the Army to pursue a new career. After nine years serving as a criminal investigator and three tours of duty in Iraq, she applied her GI Bill benefits toward a degree in history and philosophy at the University of South Alabama. But the GI Bill didn’t quite cover everything. Some of the classes she needed to pursue her desired degree program weren’t courses covered by the federal program.

Thanks to the Julius and Jean Marx Scholarship in Philosophy set up 14 years ago by Linda and Julien Marx, Tripp has been able to pursue her dream without financial hardship, with plans to one day teach at the university level.

Linda Marx met Tripp recently, in the Marx Group Study Room on the third floor of the Marx Library at the University of South Alabama.

“It’s nice to meet the people and find out what they’re doing with it, how it’s helped them, and to encourage other people to set up scholarships in what they’re interested in,” said Marx.

The Marx family has a long association with the University. In addition to the philosophy scholarship, it is also responsible for the Marx Endowed Scholarship in Philosophy-Pinebrook Scholars and the Robert Snell Endowed Scholarship in Art.

Last year, the University’s Board of Trustees voted to name the University library in honor of the Marx family in recognition of a $3 million pledge from the Julien E. Marx Foundation Trust. It will support the facility, as well as renovate the third floor to house the Doy Leale McCall Rare Book and Manuscript Library. The Marx family donated a number of significant archival materials, including the Julius E. Marx Photographic Collection, also supported through an endowment. In total, the Marx family’s gifts to the University total nearly $4 million.

But for Tripp, the most important factor of the Marx family’s generosity is that it allows her flexibility to take the classes she needs. “People assume the G.I. Bill covers everything, you’re set,” she said. Actually, it covers a defined set of courses, with little deviation allowed. The Marx Philosophy Scholarship allowed Tripp to take an important class in her field of study, Survey of Mythology, which she would otherwise have had to pay for out of her own pocket. Tripp, who describes herself as “picky about her education,” wants to take specific classes to enhance and broaden her knowledge.

Initially, Tripp was drawn to USA for its history and anthropology programs, but then met Dr. Rebecca Williams who teaches a course on Islamic cultures, and found her niche. She recently took part in an Arabic immersion program in California. “I can now read Arabic, which will be helpful, because when I graduate, I want to apply to grad school,” said Tripp.

For Tripp, knowing people support the liberal arts and dreams like hers is important. “Any type of academic merit will stand out on your CV,” Tripp explained, noting a curriculum vitae is a requirement for graduate school, detailing the applicant’s academic career and achievements. Being able to include a scholarship of this type on her CV will make Tripp more competitive in the graduate school application process. “And I appreciate it very much,” she said.

Marx described her background as working class, and said growing up, donations were limited to church. For her, philanthropy is a relatively recent undertaking. “My husband’s family introduced me to philanthropy,” she explained. “Before I got involved, I thought you gave the money and that was the end of it. That’s not how I look at it now. It’s an investment in people, an investment in your community that comes back to you.”

At the meeting, Marx thanked Tripp for her military service, and related stories of her father sheltering in foxholes in World War II.

Linda Marx said her late husband, Julien, who enjoyed a successful real estate career, had a passion for photography. “He knew he couldn’t make a living at it, but he encouraged other people to pursue their dreams of writing or art or philosophy,” Marx said.

The Marxes set up one of the scholarships to honor a former employee. “It’s a nice way to remember people that have passed on and something other people can benefit from,” she said. “That stems from the Jewish religion. They emphasize education. Knowledge is power.”

Tripp isn’t the only person benefitting from the Marx Scholarship—Marx is as well. “You do feel good,” said Marx. “That’s why people do things for other people. But it’s the type of giving: that it’s not per se charity as it is investing. In the long run, they give back a lot more than you give them, and it encourages them to do the same thing: allow people to follow their dreams.”

Investment is a much more realistic description, agrees Tripp. “For people that receive it, it means a lot because nobody wants to be seen as a charity case,” she said. “It means more than that. They believed in us and what we want to do, (enough) to go out of their way to help us pursue what we want to do.”

Marx applauded the University’s Development Office for its work with donors to achieve their philanthropic goals and make an impact in the lives of USA’s students. “You don’t have to be a millionaire to set up a scholarship,” she said. “Be thankful for what you have and do something with it.”

In that light, Tripp sees the situation coming full circle with her plan to work in higher education. “We’re all connected,” she said. “I hope I will be a successful enough professor that I can give something back. It would be nice to be able to start something up like that in the future if I am able. It is very important.”

When students return to campus this fall, they will find a new way to get their daily weather updates. The USA AtmosCenter is a student-run weather broadcast system sponsored by the USA Coastal Weather Research Center. The AtmosCenter provides weather broadcasts to students, faculty and staff with an emphasis on the possibility of severe weather affecting campus events. These aspiring meteorologists deliver weather forecasts Monday through Friday to USA students and the USA community via Jag-TV and the USA web site. The broadcasts allow students the opportunity to sharpen their television skills so they are better prepared for employment upon graduation. "This is a great opportunity for our meteorology students to gain camera experience, and at the same time provide a service to the USA community," said Dr. Bill Williams, director of the Coastal Weather Research Center.

The program had a test run in April 2014 and will resume in August with the new academic year. Students participating are either Meteorology majors or Communications majors with a minor in Meteorology. Participants must be juniors or seniors and have completed several meteorology courses.

Single telecasts are prepared Monday through Friday during the fall and spring semesters and will average three minutes in length.

AtmosCenter broadcasts have been made possible due in large part to the state-of-the-art broadcast equipment provided by Baron Services, an Alabama-based radar and television graphics company. Baron chose the University of South Alabama Coastal Weather Research Center as the first in the nation to utilize its high tech broadcast products, thus allowing for the creation of the first USA Student Broadcast Team. The program also received funding from the University of South Alabama National Alumni Association, the Department of Communications and the Department of Earth Sciences.

The mission of Coastal Weather Research Center is to protect Gulf Coast residents and the business community from loss of life, injuries and financial disaster due to adverse weather.

The Weather Center's information service is self-supporting and a unique operation for a university. Utilizing the latest in radar and satellite data, the Weather Center provides forecasts, warnings and special weather information to businesses, industries and municipal governments in nine states.

Participants pay an annual fee based on the type of service provided. The Weather Center's computer network operates 24 hours a day providing an array of forecasts, warnings, special statements and climatological data.

Thomas Battle '14, Katlin Crooks '14, Jesse Kelley, Robyn King '14 and Patrick Bigbie make up the first USA Weather Broadcast team.

USA Meteorology graduates currently employed in TV weather include:

- Chris Franklin '04, WVUE, New Orleans, La.

STRENGTH IN NUMBERS

Jags Named Champions!

The Jaguar soccer team, with a 1-0 upset of top-seeded Western Kentucky, earned the school's first Sun Belt Conference tournament championship and NCAA Tournament berth.

Jags finish in top 25 in national polls

For the third straight season, the University of South Alabama softball team broke the 40-win mark and earned the right to play in the NCAA Tournament. The team finished second in the Sun Belt Conference regular season after compiling a 15-6 league record, then earned an at-large bid to the 2014 NCAA Tuscaloosa Regional.

The program finished the year 21st in the national polls, never falling out of the top 25. The team recorded six wins over top-25 opponents this year, while ten of its 14 losses came to teams that competed in the NCAA Tournament. South Alabama was 16-2 this year at the recently renovated Jaguar Field.

Five Jaguars earned all-SBC honors, including first-teamers Hannah Campbell, Farish Beard, Chloe Rathburn, Stephanie Pilkington and second-team honoree Blair Johnson. Campbell and Beard were also named All-South Region by the National Fastpitch Coaches Association, with Campbell later earning All-American honors for the second time in her career. She is now with the Akron Racers of National Pro Fastpitch.

USA earns second place in Bubas Cup standings

The Jaguars claimed a second place finish in the final Vic Bubas Cup standings, its best result since claiming the Sun Belt Conference's all-sports trophy in 1999-2000. USA has claimed the Bubas Cup on a league-record ten occasions, including four consecutive years from 1990-1991 to 1993-1994.

The league sponsors 17 sports annually, and last year USA finished in the top half of 12. The men's and women's cross country, indoor and outdoor track and field programs accounted for half. The men's and women's tennis teams, as well as the men's golf squad all placed second at their conference championships, with the women's golf squad coming in at third. The volleyball team set a school record with nine conference victories.

In addition to recording its highest finish in the Bubas Cup competition in more than ten years, the program's 66 student-athletes earning all-league honors were the most since 68 players picked up all-SBC recognition in 2005-2006. Michael Garretson and Daniel Leitner were named the league's Player of the Year in golf and tennis, while Lauren Allison (soccer), Mechell Daniel (volleyball), Nichole Durham (cross country) and Michael Pienaar (men's outdoor track) were chosen Freshman of the Year in each of their sports.

Jags Take the Field

A challenging schedule awaits USA this fall, with the Sun Belt Conference schedule featuring back-to-back trips with league co-champions Louisiana-Lafayette and Arkansas State to open November. The season opens at Kent State on Sept. 6. The Jaguars take on a pair of Southeastern Conference opponents for the first time, playing host to Mississippi State on Sept. 13 in a national-broadcast game on ESPN News, as well as a trip to South Carolina, which finished in the top five in the final polls. The Jags host Georgia State for Homecoming Weekend and take on Troy on Oct. 24 at a home game broadcast nationally on ESPNU. The year ends with a match-up against Navy on Nov. 28.

Last season's 6-6 record tied the Jags for third in the final Sun Belt Conference standings, and earned Head Coach Joey Jones Coach of the Year accolades. The Jaguars return 45 letterwinners from last year's squad, including 15 starters highlighted by a quintet of all-conference honorees on the offensive side of the ball: Tight End Wes Saxton, Wide Receiver Shavarez Smith and Linemen Chris May and Ucambre Williams. Jay Jones was an honorable choice mention.

Back offensively for the Jags are Wide Receivers Jeremé Jones, Danny Woodson II and T. J. Glover, Tight End Rush Hendricks, Running Backs Kendall Houston and Terrance Timmons and Linemen Drew Dearman, Daniel Aust, Steven Foster, Clay Machen and Joseph Scelfo.

Brandon Bridge is slated to quarterback the team. The receiving corps adds Alabama transfers Marvin Shinn and Josh Magee and junior college All-American Tight End Braedon Bowman.

USA ranked second in the league and total defense last year, limiting the opposition to just 277 yards and 13 points per outing during the season-ending three game winning streak.

A Kickoff Year

From Service to Football to International Chapters

NAA Executive Director Karen Edwards, right, and NAA Associate Director Nick Lawkis greeted alumni at Alumni Hall for the 2013 homecoming weekend festivities.

Greetings!

I would like to begin by thanking all of you who participated in our inaugural J♥GUARSCARE National Day of Service on April 26th. As part of the Association's strategic plan, the Board of Directors sought to develop a way for Jaguars to give back, no matter where they are, together on the same day – all on behalf of the University of South Alabama. As a result of their vision, J♥GUARSCARE was born. On this special day, we had approximately 30 service projects, both nationally and internationally, 200 volunteers and just under 800 service hours performed. The support for this first-ever program was just phenomenal and we couldn't be more proud! Please mark your calendars for next year's Day of Service on Saturday, April 18, 2015.

In just a few weeks our Jaguar football team will take the field kicking off the 2014 season. Join us in Jaguar Junction, our pre-game alumni hospitality tent, on Saturday, Sept. 13, for the first home football game of the season – our long-awaited home Sun Belt/SEC matchup against the Mississippi State Bulldogs. It's finally here! And for those of you who like to follow the Jags on the road, our Runnin' with the Jags travel program kicks off on Saturday, September 6, as the Jags take on the Kent State Golden Flashes at Dix Stadium in Kent, Ohio. For more information visit our web site at www.southalabama.edu/alumni.

Also in this edition you will read about our very first international alumni chapters. We are pleased to welcome our new chapters in Dhaka, Bangladesh, and Hyderabad, India, to the Jaguar family. Jag Nation is officially global!

I would like to thank the outgoing president of the National Alumni Association Board of Directors, Ann Sirmon '87. Ann has attended countless events, participated on numerous boards and committees, and worked tirelessly on your behalf as the voice of our more than 69,000 alumni. We are very fortunate to have had a leader with her vision, commitment and professionalism, along with a dedicated and passionate Board of Directors, at the helm this past year!

In closing, I invite you to get involved – be a part of your University! Attend a chapter event in your city, help recruit new students from your area, establish a scholarship as part of the Mitchell-Moulton Scholarship Initiative, be a part of your college's alumni society and JOIN THE NATIONAL ALUMNI ASSOCIATION!

Go Jags!

Legislative Update

with Happy Fulford '73, MEd '91, USA's Executive Director of Governmental Relations

BOARD OF TRUSTEES MEMBERSHIP GUIDELINES AMENDED

In an effort to broaden the geographic representation on USA's Board of Trustees, Board leaders recently sought and received legislative approval to amend the University's section in the Code of Alabama dealing with Board membership. During the 2014 Regular Session of the Alabama Legislature that ended in April, House Speaker Pro Tempore Victor Gaston MA '70 and Senator Rusty Glover '89, MA '97, MEd '99 introduced companion bills in each Chamber to address the geographic realignment. The legislation passed quickly and the amended Code section became effective June 1, 2014. The legislation also changed the length of Board member terms from 12 years to six years, although trustees may be reappointed for additional terms.

The expanded geographic area from which the Governor can appoint members to the Board of Trustees will be phased in over the next six years. Ultimately, the 16 member board will be selected from the following areas: three members from Mobile County, five members from the state at large, two members from the United States at large, and one member from each of the following state senatorial districts, or combinations thereof, as those districts existed in 1963: (1) 16th and 17th districts, comprising Monroe and Wilcox counties, and Butler, Conecuh, and Covington counties, respectively; (2) 19th and 20th districts, comprising Choctaw, Clarke, and Washington counties, and Marengo and Sumter counties, respectively; (3) 21st district, comprising Baldwin and Escambia counties; (4) 23rd, 25th and 30th districts, comprising Dale and Geneva counties, Coffee and Crenshaw counties, and Dallas and Lowndes counties, respectively; and the (5) 35th district, comprising Henry and Houston counties. The Governor serves as an ex officio member.

The geographic realignment did not create additional positions on the Board but it did reduce the number of county-specific districts, allowing for the creation of two United States at-large positions and two more districts from the state at-large. Previously, potential Trustees had to live in districts south of Montgomery except for three state at-large positions.

INTRODUCING USA'S NEW TRUSTEES

Chandra Brown Stewart

Robert D. "Ron" Jenkins III

William S. "Sandy" Stimpson

Michael Paul Windom

Gov. Robert Bentley has appointed four new members to the University of South Alabama Board of Trustees:

- Chandra Brown Stewart of Mobile, executive director of Lifelines Counseling Services
- Robert "Ron" D. Jenkins III of Tucson, Ariz., director, business development, Raytheon Missile Systems
- William S. "Sandy" Stimpson of Mobile, mayor of the city of Mobile
- Michael P. Windom of Mobile, owner of Windom Law, LLC, a civil trial practice firm.

Reappointed to the Board by Gov. Bentley were Bryant Mixon of Geneva, Ala., retired sheriff of Dale County, Ala., and Kenneth O. Simon of Birmingham, attorney and partner with Christian & Small, LLP.*

Make USA a Part of Your Success

"Never doubt that a small group of thoughtful, committed citizens can change the world; indeed, it is the only thing that ever has" - Margaret Mead

The word service... what does it mean to you? The dictionary's definition of service is the action of helping or doing work for someone. Service synonyms: favor, kindness, good turn, helping hand.

The act of service is something that I try to incorporate into some part of my life on a daily basis. In March, the USA National Alumni Association held its Distinguished Alumni and Service Awards event. One of our Distinguished Service Award winners, Dr. Charles Rodning, gave what I believe to be the best description to date of the act of service. It was truly inspirational. He describes service as something that all of mankind should do and is the debt we owe the universe. It is a part of our being.

He shared that there are two types of service:

1. Active – is doing and willfully helping others
2. Contemplation – reflection and preparation of helping others

Additionally, he went on to share that in order to bring life to the word service, there must be a true balance between the two types service, active and contemplation, in order to serve others. I totally agree with Dr. Rodning. We must reflect, prepare and lend a helping hand in service to others. It does make a difference!

So, I invite each of you to think and then act on ways to be of service to and through the USA National Alumni Association:

- Be a member of the USA National Alumni Association (USA NAA)
- Attend USA NAA Events and athletic events
- Start/Pursue a leadership role within your local chapter
- Financially support the Mitchell–Moulton Scholarship Fund
- Volunteer during JaguarsCare Day

Get involved! Action + Reflection = Being of Service! It will do your heart good and at the same time help make the University of South Alabama and the National Alumni Association better than the way you found it.

All my best,
Ann Forbes Sirmon '87
President, USA National Alumni Association

WHERE IN THE WORLD IS SOUTHPAW?

SouthPaw visited the Tian Tan Buddah in Hong Kong with Phillip Boyer '99, who currently serves in the U.S. Navy as the USS George Washington's Ship's Nurse.

Tom '79 and Cynthia '79 Howie spent two weeks in February in Nyahururu, Kenya, delivering supplies and visiting with 19 orphan girls at the Little Drops Foundation. The Howies spent the six months before their visit raising money, with help from Warrington United Methodist Church in Pensacola, Fla., to build a chapel, add bathrooms, and buy clothes and other necessities for the compound. Griff Howie, a South Guide at USA, and other South Guide students and staff contributed more than $500 to purchase a cow to supply milk for the orphanage.

Ellen Royal, Kevin Royal and Tim Murray, all College of Medicine '94, hung out with SouthPaw at the 20 year medical school reunion in Orange Beach in June 2014.

SouthPaw joined Trent Wilkerson '13 on a recent mission trip to Belize!

SouthPaw hopped the pond to visit the Eiffel Tower along with Patsy Kennedy '96, Carol Denny, and Mark Hoffman '75.

SouthPaw is making his rounds and checking USA's servers along with Daniel Day '93, Associate Manager of USA's Student Information Systems.

Nick Lawkis '09, MPA '11, Associate Director of Alumni Relations, hands off SouthPaw to Brenda Hinson '86, MS '92, as she prepared to travel to India to recruit students. While there, Brenda and SouthPaw helped establish one of our new international chapters.

Randall Meyer '12 and SouthPaw loaded up the wagon and headed west to Seattle to check out the Space Needle.

Dr. Julee Waldrop and SouthPaw checked out the beautiful waters and beaches of Colony Key, Fla.

Take a photo of your SouthPaw and e-mail the photo, your name and the photo to alumni@southalabama.edu. We will post it on the alumni website and you just might see it in a future issue of Looking South.
